

Abstract of the Disclosure

A control program is provided on a network server, and a plurality of parallel instances of the control program are deployed to a respective plurality of thin client terminals over a network. A process is then independently controlled from each of the plurality of thin client terminals, thereby providing multiple terminal server-client operation.

531897.1